Description

This course is an introduction to cultural anthropology, which is the study of the variety of shared "ways of life" of the living and recent peoples of the world. An overview of the development and the practice of cultural anthropology is the body of the semester's work, with a special orientation to acquiring ethnographic skills - learning the content and the logic of specific cultural systems from around the world, as well as learning how to learn that which is essential in any cultural system. The teaching method is lecture, with ethnographic readings and videos. Careful note taking and study of reading assignments is essential for success in the course.

Format

There are two kinds of readings for the class: the readings for a particular day and the “Weekly Readings.” I will expect you to complete the “Weekly Readings” for a given week by Monday of that week.

Most weeks there will be a combination of lectures and discussions. The discussions will focus on the assigned readings, which should be done on time. During the days for discussion, please come to class prepared to discuss one question/topic from the reading(s). I may email you a list of questions to consider or I may ask you to generate your own.

Attendance

Note that your attendance at all sessions is required and that your participation is expected.

Evaluation

Students will be evaluated on the basis of two exams (20% each), one 10 page project (45%), and class participation (15%). Late papers will be penalized 5 percent per day. You must complete all assignments for the class. The instructor reserves the right to exercise some discretion in assigning final grades.

Project

Using the tools provided by this course, write an anthropological analysis of some aspect of the world around you. You will present your findings to the class for discussion.

Honor Code

All student work is governed by the honor code. If you have a question about how the honor code applies to a particular assignment, you should raise that question with the professor in advance of the due date.
